CIRCUIT COURT.

Three Convictions in Felony Cases.

The Segraves Brothers are now Being Tried for Robbing Dr. Gambill.

The Lawrence Circuit Court is about at the close of a very busy second week, with a fair prospect for a third, possibly a fourth week's session. Up to this hour there have been two convictions for felony. William Harris, who lives in the Gallup neighborhood, was convicted of cutting down and carrying away timber of the value of more than twenty dollars, belonging to another. The punishment is confinement in the penitentiary for one year. Harris came to this county from Rowan, and is said to have originally come from Ohio. It is said that he bought a boundary of timber near Gallup and endeavored to get the seller to include land not in the purchased tract. The vendor of the land refused to do this, and Harris, it is alleged, cut and carried away part of the timber on the land he failed to get. Ben and Frank Fisher, sons of William Fisher, were convicted of false swearing, the penalty for which is confinement in the pen from one to five years. They are young, and if can be shown that they are minors they will be sent to the School of Reform. These boys had been tried for shooting on the public highway, and had sworn they were not on the road at the time charged and had not fired any pistols. It was afterwards proved they had done as charged, hence this trial and conviction. Henry Loar jointly indicted with a man named Rickman for effacing brands from timber, was tried for one offense and acquitted. The other cases for the same offence were continued until the 5th day of the next term. Judge A. J. Kirk, of Paintsville, presided as judge in this case. The timber from which the marks had been obliterated was the property of the Vansant-Kitchen Co., and Judge Hannah, a brother-in-law of Mr. Vansant, declined to sit in the case. The suit growing out of the disposition of the property of John Hackworth, deceased, was settled by compromise, the principal beneficiaries paying the contestants a certain amount. Mr. Walker Mayo, Fred Walker and other interested parties were here, attending the adjustment of the case.

The jury in the case of Garred Wilson against Jerome Hardin, a suit brought to recover damages for alleged breach to contract, awarded Wilson $183.33. The grand jury adjourned Thursday.

The court has gone into the trial of the two Segraves boys, charged with the burglary committed at the residence of Dr. John Gambill, of Blaine. The court appointed counsel to defend them and they demanded separate trials.

VARIOUS PULPITS SUPPLIED.

On Sunday morning last the Rev. Roscoe Murray, of the Baptist church preached at the M. E. Church South, for the pastor, Rev. J. W. Crittes, who continues ill. At night the pulpit was filled by the Rev. M. A. Hay, also of the Baptist church.

On Sunday evening Mr. W. J. Vaughan delivered an interesting address to a good audience in the Baptist church. He spoke along educational and religious lines, presenting some important facts in a very intelligent way.

REV. R. F. RICE.

The Rev. French Rice has returned from Richardson, where he held a very successful meeting. The church was greatly revived, with many conversions and accessions to the membership. Mr. Rice also recently organized a Sunday school at Torchlight.

Mrs. Dock Jordan has returned from Ashland, where she had been nursing Miss Virginia Russell.

LOSE GOOD PEOPLE.

Following Mr. Nash's acceptance of a position with Shipman-Williams, of Ashland, he and Mrs. Nash have taken residence in that city. Their removal from Louisa causes our people to regret the loss of two very nice people. Mr. and Mrs. Nash have lived in this city several years, and during that period they won the esteem of their many friends. As members of the M. E. Church South they were active and useful and both church and Sunday school work. Mrs. Nash was a prominent and intelligent member of the Woman's Missionary Society, contributing greatly to its worth and efficiency. In the social realm she was esteemed and popular.

Mr. Nash was prominent in the business activities of Louisa as well as in the church. He was courteous and genial, and when it came to assisting in social affairs, directing and taking part in functions arranged for the benefit of the church and the public "Gat" was always ready with his skill and marked ability along this line.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Nash wish for them a pleasant and profitable residence in Ashland.

Trouble for Their Pains.

Those candidates for county and city office throughout Kentucky who have begun to circulate nominating petitions among the voters, will have their trouble for their pains and may be barred from getting their names on the primary ballot. The law is very specific in stating that no nominating petition shall be circulated until ninety days before the primary, August 2, 1913, and any signatures obtained before that time are worthless and must be stricken. The law requires not only the signature of the petitioner and his party affiliation, but also the date when it was affixed. In a number of counties candidates unacquainted with this provision of the law have already started to secure signatures to their nominating petitions.

STRIKEN IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Representative Langley, Republican of Kentucky, was stricken on the floor of the House late to-day by a rush of blood to his head shortly after he had concluded speaking on a private pension bill, which was under consideration.

His colleagues rushed to his side and he was removed to the cloak room, where he was attended by Representative Foster.

DEATH OF AGED SISTER.

Mr. J. W. Yates, of this city, has received the sad news of the death of his last surviving sister, Mrs. Susan Yates Everett. She died at Oklahoma City, Okla., on Jan. 4th, of a grippe. If she had lived until March next Mrs. Everett would have been 90 years old. The body was taken to Missouri, the former home of the deceased, for interment. She was one of a family of eleven children, eight girls and three boys.

SOLD INSURANCE STOCK

Tobe Wiley Indicted for Transaction Involving Large Sum.

The Lawrence county grand jury last week indicted Tobe Wiley, of Paintsville, for selling stock in the Central Life Insurance company of Louisville under misrepresentations. The indictment was made by Mr. Woods, of Webbville, who contracted to invest $1500 with Wiley. He paid half cash and gave his note for the balance.

Wiley was arrested and brought here and gave bond. The case came up for trial yesterday, but the Commonwealth was not ready and a continuance was ordered till next term.

It is said Wiley made deals with several other good citizens in the upper Blaine section of this county, amounting to several thousand dollars. Two men are reported to have bought $3000 each, two other $1500 each, and two $1000 each.

Wiley collected half cash and took notes due in one year for the balance. It is alleged he represented among other things that the dividends from the stock would pay the notes at maturity.

RECEPTION TO STUDENTS.

On Friday night last the two societies of the Louisa Baptist church entertained the students of the K. N. C. with a reception given in the Sunday school room of the church. The exercises were presided over by Fred See, Pres. of the B. Y. P. S. After prayer and some good singing Dr. G. W. Wroten addressed the audience on the subject "The Doctor and The Young Man." At the close of the doctor's remarks the pastor, the Rev. Olus Hamilton spoke on "The Young Man and The Church." Mr. Hamilton spoke well and entertainingly and was listened to with much attention. Attorney See then made an excellent address on "The Young Man and The Law." His address was to the point and was well received. After the oratory those present were refreshed with delicious ice cream and cake. Altogether it was a very pleasant occasion, much enjoyed by the large number present.

SETTLEMENT SCHOOL.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 13.—Articles of incorporation of the "Pine Mountain Settlement School" were filed here to-day. It is a philanthropic organization and has no capital stock. The object of the incorporators is to establish at the foot of Pine Mountains, near Jane, Ky., in Harlan county, on the middle fork of Kentucky River, a school for the industrial, intellectual and moral training of children of the mountain districts, and more than one school will be established if found practicable. The incorporators are Katherine Pettitt, Mary Delong, of Hindman; Elizabeth C. Hench, Indianapolis, Ind.; Calvin N. Kendall, of Princeton, N. J.; Viola Sullivan, of Winchester, Mass.; Elizabeth Moore, of St. Louis, and Dr. Harry Fosdick, of Montclair, N. J.

GARRED RECEPTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Garred, who were married in this city on the evening of January 7th, and who went to Lexington, Ky., the home of the bride the following day, returned to Louisa on Monday evening last. Their return was signalized by a reception given them by the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Garred, which was quite the social event of the season. No invitations save indirect ones had been extended, but the old friends of Mr. Garred and the new ones of his beautiful young wife thronged the wide halls and spacious apartments of the Garred home and gave hearty welcome to the son of the hosts and to the new sister and daughter. Indeed, throughout the evening there was a marked absence of restraint and formality, their places being taken by a genuine Kentucky hospitality and a warmth of welcome which put everyone at his ease.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Garred received, and the appearance of Charley York and his bonnie bride as assistants in the greeting of the guests first of this week.

gave all an opportunity to see and meet the former bells of Paintsville. The NEWS will, if it ever gets the time, take a special course in How to tell what she wore, in ten lessons. Just now its readers must be content with reading, what very many already know, that Mrs. Garred looked exceedingly well in an evening gown which, on account of its richness and becomingness—is this a good word?—showed her loveliness to the best advantage. There now. Isn't this worth more than half a column about trimmings and stuffs and things you can neither spell nor pronounce? Passing from hall to reception room one entered upon a scene of much attractiveness. Very many of Louisa's prominent people "had gathered there, and bright the lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men." Bryan said this of an assembly at a ball in Brussels. Perhaps it was true of that scene, the NEWS knows it is true of the lights which shone at Monday night's reception in Louisa. No other city of its size can equal Louisa in its number of handsome maidens and matrons, and many of these in gray garb and garniture, graced this occasion.

It is encouraging to know that the moonlight schools are continuing and prospering, and that Mrs. Stewart believes they are "no longer in the experimental stage." In Rowan county, she says, "the system has become as firmly established as the day school." The enrollment of 1912 which was large, was greatly surpassed by the enrollment for 1912. Also the system has spread "to a greater or less extent over some eight or ten other counties in Kentucky and to many counties in Tennessee."

The refreshments, bountiful and most delicious, were served in the dining room. Mrs. George R. Vinson and Mrs. Jay Vinson served these, and Mrs. Dora Greaver poured the coffee. There was also a never failing spring of most delicious punch with which Mrs. Vic Prichard tried to quench the thirst of the guests.

After the older guests had gone the younger people prolonged the festivities to the small hours of the following day. Music and dancing were much enjoyed. A big cake was cut, and from its delicious depths here came a ring for Miss Helen Vinson, a dime for Miss Virginia Hager, a needle for Miss Imogene Porter and a thimble for a lady who up to now has failed to reveal her identity.

From its Alpha to its Omega the auspicious event was most enjoyable and without flaw.

DEATH OF JAS. EVANS.

One of our Best Citizens Passes Away After Brief Illness.

After an illness of about five months caused by cancer of the liver, Mr. James Evans, a well known citizen of this county and resident of Louisa, died at his home early Wednesday morning. Funeral services were held at the M. E. Church South on Thursday morning conducted by the Rev. O. F. Williams, of Russel, Presiding Elder of the Ashland District. Immediately after the service the body was carried to the private burial ground of the family, near Pine Hill cemetery, and there interred. The funeral and interment were largely attended. Mr. Evans was 71 years old and is survived by his widow, four children, three sisters and three brothers. The children are Mrs. Esther Osborne, of Blaine, Milt and Henry, of Louisa, and Frank. The sisters are Mrs. James K. Rice, of Fallsburg, Mrs. Greene Bolt, of Boyd-co., and Mrs. Cox Hawes, of Chandler, Okla. The brothers are Wheeler, of Hoadley, O., Charles, of Chandler, Okla., and W. L. of this city. The deceased was born in Magoffin county, this State, but for many years had been a citizen of Lawrence county, residing at Prospect until a year ago, when he moved to this city. He was a good citizen and a good man in the full meaning of the words. He was strictly sober, moral, honest and industrious. He was a faithful member of the M. E. Church South, kindly in manner and disposition and without an enemy. In his death the wife lost a devoted husband, the children a kind parent, the community one of its valued members. By these and many friends his loss will be keenly felt.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

MOONLIGHT SCHOOL.

Rowan County's Successful Experiment Now a Permanent Affair.

Another illuminating chapter in regard to the progress of the moonlight schools was published in the Sunday Courier-Journal. It was written by Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, Superintendent of Schools in Rowan county, who started the night-school movement in that section in 1911.

It is encouraging to know that the moonlight schools are continuing and prospering, and that Mrs. Stewart believes they are "no longer in the experimental stage." In Rowan county, she says, "the system has become as firmly established as the day school." The enrollment of 1911 which was large, was greatly surpassed by the enrollment for 1912. Also the system has spread "to a greater or less extent over some eight or ten other counties in Kentucky and to many counties in Tennessee."

"Nard" Holt, as he was familiarly called, was a well known and highly respected citizen. He was honest, sober, industrious and a consistent member of the church, and the community in which he lived so long will greatly feel the loss of such a man.

He was kindly and genial in manner, staunch in his friendship. The county can ill afford to lose such as he.

FUNERAL OF B. P. HOLT.

Mr. Bernard Holt, whose death on Thursday last was noted in this paper last week, was buried Friday at Busseyville, where he had for many years lived. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. C. B. Plummer, pastor of the Louis M. E. Church, and were largely attended. The deceased was in the 69th year of his age, having passed his 68th birthday Nov. 7th, 1912. He was born near Fort Gay and for several years was a resident of this city. He then moved to Busseyville where, in connection with Mont Bussey, he engaged in the saw and grist mill business. Mr. Holt is survived by his wife, two sisters, Mrs. Andrew Eaves, of Ashland, and Mrs. Lydia Atkins, of Louisa; one brother, William, and eight children—Mrs. Ruby Carter, of Princess, Boyd county, Land and Mont Holt, of Louisa, Webb, of Busseyville, Mrs. John Cheap, of Casey county, Ky., Opal and Pearl Holt, of Busseyville, and Mrs. John Hays, of Adams.

NO WATER SUPPLY.

"Water, water everywhere but not a drop to drink," was the cry of a shipwrecked mariner ages ago. With some variation that has been the cry in Louisa for several days. First the flood in Sandy submerged the pumping plant, then a crank shaft broke, and as a result the water has been off since Monday, causing much inconvenience to the public. The new piece of machinery to replace the broken part arrived Thursday and the works will be in operation as soon as repairs can be made.

DOINGS OF PEOPLE WHO LIVE JUST ACROSS THE RIVER.

St. Clarisville, Ohio, Jan. 6.—Dr. W. Baker, for 17 years mayor of Barnesville, died today of blood poisoning.

Bluefield, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Principal McKeever, of the Norfolk schools, is in a serious condition as a result of being beaten and cut by Wiley and John Stamper, who represented the correction of the daughter of John Stamper and sister of Wiley. The girl made a practice of going home during recess and not returning and the principal made her stand in the corner for penance. Mr. McKeever may not recover.

Piedmont, W. Va., Jan. 7.—It costs residents of this city 75 cents for the mere privilege of going to Frostburg or Cumberland. It costs 75 cents to be vaccinated and a quarantine has been established because of smallpox. Since the epidemic began physicians boosted the price of vaccinating from 50 to 75 cents and the residents of the city are very wrothy thereof. One physician vaccinated over 70 in an hour.

Harrisville, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Luther Murphy is being closely guarded in the jail to prevent him from being attacked by angry citizens following his arrest on a charge of having improper relations with the eleven year-old daughter of James Shuman, of Straight Park. Two persons testified to having seen him in the criminal act.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 7.—L. G. Humphreys, of Grafton, a young Baltimore & Ohio fireman, recently transferred to this division, is in the King's Daughters hospital today, probably fatally wounded as a result of being literally blown from the tank of his engine in a high wind west of here. When picked up he was bleeding and unconscious.

Henry Cassady, alleged to have been implicated in the murder of Bib Chaffin at Nolan about one year ago, was arrested last week at Prestonsburg, Ky., and was brought to Williamson by William Damron, deputy county clerk. There was a reward of $100 for the capture of Cassady.

Mr. Damron learned where Cassady was located and had the Kentucky officers take him in charge until his arrival. Arrest was made without any difficulty.

It is alleged that Jim Starr, who escaped from the county jail a few weeks ago, Cassady and several others entered into a conspiracy to kill Chaffin. At the time of the killing it is said that Cassady as well as Starr shot at Chaffin.

Cassady is a married man and told Mr. Damron he is afraid his wife will freeze to death with nobody to gather stove wood for her at her little mountain home.

On last Saturday morning about 6 o'clock the Buskirk hotel was discovered to be on fire and in a short time was a total loss, so quickly did the flames spread. Most of the contents were destroyed, and although some of the boarders saved a part of their belongings others barely escaped.

The building was insured for $8,000. The origin of the fire is unknown.—Logan Democrat.

Charleston.—Rioting was resumed last night in the Paint creek section of the Kanawha coal field, where a strike has been in progress since last spring, according to reports received by the military authorities here this afternoon. The Standard mine of the Standard Gas Coal Co. was fired and today was reported as burning fiercely. The crew of a coal train was attacked near Holly Grove railroad yards, not far from a camp maintained by the striking miners. An attempt was made to dynamite the house of a man named Smith, near Holly Grove. He brought his family to this city for safety.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 8.—Some of the young fellows of the West Side broke into the Calvary Baptist church a night or so ago and stole 180 pounds of candy, 2 crates of oranges, and over 50 pounds of nuts, left over sweets from the Christmas treat.

The young people who engaged in the "turkey-trot," "grizzly bear" and "bunny hug"—the new and startling dances—at the charity hall given at Huntington last Friday night, are being severely condemned by those who had charge of the hall. They promise the unrefined dances will not be indulged in again at a charity ball—if they have charge of it.

The Wayne County Court organized Monday by electing C. M. Fraley President. H. W. Thompson, who succeeded I. F. Counts took his seat on the Court Monday.

Harry E. Kulp, aged 34, son of a prominent Wilkes Barre, Pa., attorney was arrested at Pittsburgh charged with violating the Mann white slave act. Kulp and a companion Steve Stevens are said to have had a flourishing business transporting young girls into West Virginia mining camps for immoral purposes. The girls were promised paying positions and then dumped into dens of iniquity.

The United Fuel Gas Co. have located a well on Mont Robertson's farm on Mill Creek in Butler district and will begin drilling soon.

Mrs. A. R. Tabor, of Cider, Mo. had been troubled with sick headache for about five years, when she began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. She has taken two bottles of them and they have cured her. Sick headache is caused by a disordered stomach for which these tablets are especially intended. Try them, get well and stay well. Sold by Louisia Drug Co.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN.

COLUMN DEDICATED TO TIRED MOTHERS AS THEY JOIN THE HOME CIRCLE AT EVENING TIDE.

Don't work too hard. God meant us to work every day until we are weary, but not until we are so weary that a night's rest cannot revive and restore us to strength and vigor again. When you rise morning after morning with weary limbs and heavy heart, you may know that you are breaking the laws of health and that your punishment is and will be heavy. The world, your friends and family have no right to demand from you more than you can do, and if you are a wise woman you will not give all the strength and warmth and beauty of your life, to labor and have only the dregs left for love. Keep enough strength, take enough rest to preserve a cheerful heart and a bright face, when the family gather about the fireside after the day's work is done. Do one thing at a time. Don't hurry don't worry. Face the issue of life fairly and squarely; do your share of work, that is, what you can do without injuring yourself, and put the rest resolutely behind you. Take some relaxation. Every human being needs recreation and amusement of some sort. Get it from books or people with news and helpful thoughts, that will keep your ideas bright and your heart cheerful.

The best society for the oppression of pernicious literature is the family. The best legislation that can be passed for the prevention of the sale of vile literature can be passed by the father and mother. Daily teaching to love and study good and useful things will bring the boys and girls to detest the opposite.

Don't scold your wife. If you must scold somebody, scold us. What is needed in the training of the tots is more patience while their minds are developing. Let them see gentleness and by and by they will adopt it. Let us act ourselves a little more as we wish them to. Example with children weighs more than advice. This holds good all along the road, from infancy to maturity. With wine on the sideboard, progressive euchre in the parlor, sensational, trashy literature on the table and cigars on the mantle, we need not be surprised when the crop of drunkards or gamblers of diseased hearts and wishy-washy minds come in. The seed has been planted, the crop must grow. Not all may fall to the lowest depths, perhaps, but who can say which will be saved? It is not the will of the Creator that one of these little ones should perish; and woe is in store for him who places occasions to fall in their way.

Hold on to the troubles you have for when they go there may come worse ones. We shall not have our grandmothers with us long, and may not the thought impel us to cheer her and make her as happy as we can, while Never whip a balky horse. Sell him if you can't manage him and let the other fellow match his temper against that of the horse.

Fashion has been declined as a peculiar influence which makes a woman drape herself in a horse blanket and think she looks stunning.

Have you received a good turn? Forget it not. Have you done one? Remember it not.

Mother.

To the young ladies who weekly read this column, we are moved by the good spirit to write a few words concerning their duties to their mothers. It may be you have noticed a careworn look upon her face lately. Of course it has not been brought there by any act of yours; still it is your duty to chase it away.

Would it not be a happy surprise to her if you should occasionally bid her sit down and rest while you performed the arduous duties in hand? And how a tender kiss on her mouth will cause her dear face to brighten. Anyway you owe her a kiss or two. Away back, when you were a little bit of a girl she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever tainted breath and swollen face. You were not so attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childlike sunshine and shadows, she was always ready to cure by the magic of mother's kiss, your little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured in the first skirmishes with the rough old world.

And then the midnight kiss with which she routed so many bad dreams as she leaned above your restless pillow, have all been on interesting these long, long years.

Of course she is not so pretty and kissable as you are; but if you had done your share of the work during the last ten years, the contrast would not be so marked.

Her face has more wrinkles than yours, and yet if you were sick that face would appear far more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort, and every one of these wrinkles seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face.

She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands that have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast.

Those neglected lips that gave you your first baby kiss will be forever closed, and those sad, tired eyes will have opened on sterility, and then you will appreciate your mother; but it will be too late.

In all probability you have often wished to own a piano or to be the proud possessor of a beautiful diamond Ring or a handsome Elgin Watch.

The Big Sandy News now offers a plan whereby without spending one cent and with only just a little effort for a few short weeks, you can secure one of these most magnificent prizes.

How Votes Are Secured.

With every subscription the Big Sandy News, (when it is asked or) is given a ballot good for a certain number of votes, according to the length of the subscription. These ballots may be held as long as desired and voted at any time up to the last day of the contest. In fact, it is well to hold back a large percent. of your vote ballots, as then no one knows how many votes you have, and are less likely to have someone who knows that you have turned in all of your subscriptions and had the vote published, to step in the last moment and get the prize you desire. If you hold back part of your ballots no one knows (not even the contest department, for no record is kept of vote ballots issued to you) how many they must have to win, and will not take the chance of spending their money for nothing.

Votes may also be clipped from the paper and are given with purchase made at the stores of the merchants who are members of the campaign.

Votes given with purchases at stores are good five days from date thereon.

How Prizes Will be Distributed

The Grand Prize—the beautiful $350 Piano—will be awarded to the contestant who has the highest votes polled in the entire contest.

The contestant standing highest in each district after the grand prize has been awarded, will be given a handsome Diamond Ring.

The contestant standing second highest in each district, after the grand prize has been awarded, will be given a handsome Diamond Ring.

The contestant standing third highest in each district, after the grand prize has been awarded, will be given a 15 jeweled Elgin Watch.

The contestant standing fourth highest in each district, after the grand prize has been awarded, will be given a 7 jeweled Elgin Watch.

Former President Roosevelt is out in a statement in which he opposes any union of the Moose and Elephant. It is quite evident that the Colonel is not in the political game for fun, but for business, and that if the Regulars have any hope that he will renounce his present "heresy" they are mistaken.

Jack Coleman, at Harrodsburg, Ky., undertook on a wager to shoot a hole through Henry Marshall's hat without hitting his head.

Marshall's funeral was largely attended.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

Miss Emma Thompson, of Webville, has been appointed to fill the vacancy in the office of Secretary of the Lawrence County Sunday School Association caused by the death of Okey J. Vaughan.

So well and favorably known is Miss Thompson to the people of Lawrence County that she needs no introduction. For a number of years Miss Thompson has been a teacher in the public schools of the County, and in that sphere, by untiring industry and good sense, she has acquired an enviable reputation. In fact, there are but few teachers her equal in the State. As Rural School Supervisor she has performed a public service that is worthy and commendable. The Sunday School workers are to be congratulated on securing this splendidly talented, Christian lady to take up the work so gloriously laid down by our lamented Brother.

Miss Thompson's address is Webville, and it will greatly assist and encourage her if every district officer and superintendent in the county will write her, pledging support and co-operation. Please do not neglect this. Her work is to be a labor of love, and we ought to help in this way.

The committeemen can not be appointed but must be elected.

The importance of this to the party can hardly be over-estimated.

BIG SANDY NEWS.

PRAISE OUR TEACHERS.

Report of Prof. Coates Published in Southern School Journal.

she is an apprentice to a master workman. I saw her teach and she did it better than a great majority of beginning teachers because she has Prof. McClure's advice and assistance every day. She has been over the eighth grade work time and again, and her parents are glad to have her assist. At first some of the people objected, but the success of the plan has been so great that the objections have practically ceased. I asked this bright girl how she taught, and she said: "I teach the way the children learn easiest." Would it not be a good thing if some of the "devotees to method" would adopt this girlish philosophy? Some overworked teachers might adopt, with profit to themselves and to the schools, Prof. McClure's plan of using pupil teachers.

I was impressed with the results of the work of supervision in Lawrence county. Lawrence employs two supervisors—Prof. John Ekers and Miss Emma Thompson. The actual results of three months' supervision has been as follows:

1. A complete grading of all the schools.
2. League work in all the schools.

The Leagues have raised over $1,000 in cash and have done over $2,000 worth of work.

4. Each supervisor has put over 100 children into school who had never been in school before.

5. Teachers are writing to the people and visiting them. The average attendance of the schools in 1909 for the first three months was 1900, in 1910 it was 40; in 1911 it was 48 and 1912 it is 60 per cent of the census.

6. Teachers' meetings have been organized.

7. Board has been assisted in letting contracts, and supervisors have supervised buildings of out houses, saving money to the board.

9. Cooking, sewing and agriculture introduced.

10. Schools have been kept going while teachers have been sick.

Every teacher I talked to was in favor of supervision. There is just one thing about the whole matter. If school work is worth while, supervisors are a good investment.

G. E. Pigg, Cross St., Louisa, Ky., says: "I am glad to confirm the testimonial I gave in 1908 recommending Doan's Kidney Pills for they gave me entire relief from kidney trouble and backache at that time.

I have been free from this trouble ever since. For several years I was subject to severe backaches. I suffered greatly from backache and had much difficulty in passing the kidney secretions. Sometimes the secretions were profuse, then again scant and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills were procured at the Louisa Drug Store Co., and they gave me the first relief I had received.

After using this remedy I enjoyed better health and entire freedom from kidney trouble."

CARD FROM G. W. SKAGGS.

To the citizens and tax payers of Lawrence county, Ky. You will see my announcement as a candidate for the office of county attorney in this paper. Now I want to say to you that the office of county attorney is the most important office to the people in the county, it is the only office that the law requires to be filled by a lawyer, it is his duty to advise all the rest of the officers in doing their duty. The welfare of the county depends first on the county attorney, the fiscal court which is composed of the county judge, and the justices of the peace of the county, and it has control of the financial and other business. It is made up of honest men, farmers and other business men, and I never saw a time when they would not do right if they only knew how, and it is the duty of the county attorney to legally and properly advise them in doing their duty. He is paid to do that, I will tell you that I am qualified to do the duties of that office and that if you will nominate and elect me I will make you an honest, sober, efficient and dutiful officer. Now don't infer that I mean that there are not other lawyers in the county qualified, and could and would make you a good officer, for there are plenty of them. Mr. A. J. Garred, who has announced himself as a candidate in this paper, is qualified and has all the necessary qualifications and could and would make you a good county attorney, but I do believe this: Mr. Garred is what we call in this country a wealthy man, he owns good and valuable property in Louisa, has thousands of dollars of stock in the First National Bank of Louisa and is now the vice president of said bank, and remember that you by your votes gave him or put him in a position to make his money. He was circuit court clerk for twelve years when the office was worth much more than now. Now if you believe that I am first qualified and will make you the kind of an officer that I have told you I would, I do honestly believe you ought to vote for me in the primary which comes the first Saturday in August next, but if you don't believe that, you ought not to, for that is the kind of an officer you ought to have, more especially for County Attorney. Now don't you believe in all honesty and fair-dealing, that if two men live in the county, equally qualified alike to hold a certain office, and one of them has held an office in the county for twelve years and made himself a good living and the other has never held an office wouldn't it be fair to give the one who had never held an office at least one chance, I have for a number of years had an ambition to be County Attorney of this county, for I do believe that I could and would help this county, more especially in the roads with the means at hand, so please give my claims an honest and fair hearing, and if you nominate and elect me I assure you that my acts as your officer will be such that you will never be ashamed of having voted for me, and so far as that office is concerned there will be no big I's or little U's but every man will be fairly represented, I would be much pleased to see and talk with every man in the county, but that could not change anything, most of you know me, and I want every man to inquire about my reputation as a lawyer, whether or not I have always tried to be honest in my profession or not. So hoping for a favorable report on my claim, I remain as ever,

Very truly Yours,

G. W. SKAGGS.

KENTUCKY NEIGHBORS.

Pikeville, Ky., Jan. 8.—Denying that he was illegally elected and that he in any way corrupted the voters of Pike and Letcher counties, John F. Butler, Republican, who on the face of the returns was elected Circuit Judge at the election November 5, yesterday filed his answer to the suit contesting the election, filed two weeks ago by J. M. Roberson, Democrat. A counter-claim, alleging that many ballots were illegally cast for Roberson, is included in the answer.

Butler and Roberson were the opposing candidates for Circuit Judge of the Thirty-fifth judicial district, which includes Pike and Letcher counties. The returns indicated that Butler was elected.

The answer was filed by O'Rear & Williams; J. J. Moore, E. J. Picklesimer and D. D. Fields, attorneys for Butler.

In his petition Roberson charged the Republicans with corrupting the ballot in many ways. He alleged intimidation and bribery of voters and that a fund of from $8,000 to $15,000 was used in the two counties to win the election for the Republicans.

Butler's answer takes up each of these charges in detail and denies all of them. He denies that the election officials allowed anyone to vote after the proper time not counted. One of the charges made against Butler was that he promised certain voters, in a speech, that if they would vote for him he would dismiss certain pending litigation. Butler denies this and declares that he never at any time poimised any voter favors in return for his support.

Licking river is higher than it has been for several years. It began raining Monday morning and continued almost incessantly until Wednesday morning. Reports from Salyersville are that the town is inundated and the people compelled to flee from their houses. Winchester, Ky.—As the result of an altercation growing out of a remark regarding his daughter, Thos. D. Berryman, aged 47, a respectable farmer and grocer, of Trapp, this county, was shot to death Thursday night a short time after 12 o'clock, by Dillard Fluty, a young man said to be from Estill county.

The shooting occurred at a dance given at the home of Samuel Berryman, a kinsman of the victim of the tragedy. Three shots were fired, all taking effect and Mr. Berryman died instantly. Fluty escaped and is being sought in Madison county.

Whitesburg.—After a heated contest between Robert Blair and L. Wilson Fields, of this city, for the office of County Attorney of Letcher county, the office made vacant by the election of R. Monroe Fields for Commonwealth's Attorney of the new Pike-Letcher district, Blair received the appointment from County Judge John D. Fitzpatrick. Blair is an independent Republican.

The social given New Year's night at the home of Mrs. Cloral Kitchen, Pres. of the Y. P. Christian Endeavor at Willard, to the members of the C. E. was a delightful affair. CHAPTER XXV.

A Lost Regiment.

It was a bright, sunny day in early spring. Birds were sweetly singing in the trees lining the road I was traveling. I must have shown my late illness greatly, for the few I met, as I tramped slowly onward, mostly soldiers, gazed at me curiously, as if they mistook me for the ghost or some dead comrade; and I doubt not my pale face, yet bearing the deep imprint of pain, with the long, untrimmed hair framing it, and the blood-stained, ragged uniform, the same I wore that fierce day of battle, rendered me an object of wonder.

All through those long, weary winter weeks I had been hovering between life and death in an obscure hospital at Richmond. The moment the door was opened to permit of my passing forth into the world again, I sought eagerly to discover the present station of my old comrades in arms, yet could learn only that the cavalry brigade with which I had formerly served was in camp somewhere near Appomattox Court House. On foot and moneyless, I set off alone, my sole anxiety to be once more with friends; and now, at the beginning of the second day, I was already beyond Petersburg, and sturdy pushing westward. As the road swerved slightly to the left, passing through a grove of handsome trees, I came suddenly opposite a large house of imposing aspect. A group of Confederate officers stood in converse beside the gate leading into the open driveway, and as I paused a moment, gazing at them and wondering whom I had better address—for I recognised none of the faces fronting me—one among the group turned suddenly, and took a hurried step in my direction, as though despatched upon an errand of importance. He was a tall, slender man, wearing a long gray moustache, and I no sooner viewed his face than I recognised him as having been one of those officers present in General Lee's tent the day I was sent out with dispatches. He glanced at me curiously, yet with no sign of recognition, but before he could pass I accosted him.

"Colonel Maitland," I said, "you doubtless remember me. I am seeking my old command; would you kindly inform me where it may be found?"

He stopped instantly at sound of my voice, and stared at me in odd bewilderment; but my words had already reached the ears of the others, and before he had found an answer another voice spoke sternly "What is all this? Who are you, sir? What masquerade puts you into that parody of a captain's uniform?"

I turned and looked into the flushed, indignant face of General Lee.

"It is no masquerade, sir," I answered, instantly removing my hat; "it is the rightful uniform of my rank, greatest as I regret its present condition."

"Where are you from?"

"I was discharged from St. Mary's Hospital in Richmond day before yesterday, and am now seeking to rejoin my regiment."

"Surely," he said gravely, "I have seen your face before. To what regiment were you attached?"

"The—Virginia Cavalry."

The buzzing of voices about me instantly ceased, and General Lee took a step nearer.

"The—Virginia? You were a captain? Surely this is not Phillip Wayne!"

So deeply surprised was his tone, so uncertain his recognition, I scarcely knew what to answer. Had I lost my very identity? Was this all a dream?

"I am Captain Wayne, Troop D,—the Virginia."

He grasped my hand warmly between both his own, and his kindly face lit up instantly with a rare smile.

"Captain Wayne, I cannot tell you how greatly I rejoice at your safe return. We certainly owe you an apology for this poor reception, but you were reported as killed in action many months ago. I doubt not Colonel Maitland truly believed he looked upon a ghost when you first accosted him."

For the moment I was unable to speak, so deeply did his words affect me.

"I fear, Captain Wayne," he continued gravely, yet retaining my hand within his own, "that I must bring you sad news."

"Sad news?" Instantly there came to me the thought of my widowed mother. "Not from home, I trust, sir?"

"No," with great tenderness, "your mother, I believe, remains well; yet the words I must speak are nevertheless sad ones, and must prove a severe shock to you. There is no—th Virginia."

"No—th Virginia?" I echoed, scarce able to comprehend his meaning, "no—th Virginia? I beg you to explain, sir; surely—and I looked about me upon the various uniforms of the service present—the war has not yet ceased—we have not surrendered!"

"No, my boy," and the old hero reverently bared his gray head in the sunlight, "but the—th Virginia gave itself to the South that day in the Shenandoah."

I must have grown very white, for a young aide sprang hastily forward and passed his arm about me. Yet I scarcely realised the action, for my whole thought was with the dead.

"Do you mean they are all gone?" I questioned, tremblingly, hardly able to grasp the full dread import of such ghastly tidings. "Surely, General Lee, some among them must have come back."

"So few," he responded soberly, his hat still retained in his hand, "so few that we could only scatter them in other commands. But you have not yet fully recovered your strength. You must not remain longer standing here. Major Holmes, will you kindly conduct Captain Wayne to my headquarters, and see that he is furnished with a uniform suitable to his rank.

"Surely This Is Not Phillip Wayne?"

For the present he will serve as extra upon my personal staff."

I turned away, the Major leading me as if I had been a child. I walked as a man stunned by some sudden, unexpected blow. When I finally joined the mess upon the following day, clad now in fit uniform, I had regained no small measure of self-restraint, and with it came likewise renewal of the military spirit. My welcome proved extremely cordial, and the conversation of the others present soon placed in my possession whatever of incident had occurred since that disastrous day of battle in the valley. No attempt was made to conceal our weakness, nor to disguise the fact that we were making a last desperate stand. It was evident to all that nothing now remained but to fold our tattered battle-dags with honor.

Directly opposite me, at the long and rather scantily furnished mess-table, was seated a captain of infantry, quite foreign in appearance—a tall, slender man, wearing a light-colored moustache and goatee. His name, as I gathered from the conversation, was Carlson, and I was considerably surprised at the fixedness with which his eyes were fastened upon me during the earlier part of the meal. Thinking we might have met somewhere before, I ransacked my memory in vain for any recollection which would serve to account for his evident interest in me. Finally, I ventured to ask, as pleasantly as possible:

"I Was Upon My Feet in an Instant."

"Captain Carlson, do I remind you of some one, since you regard me so intently?"

The man instantly flushed all over his fair face at this direct inquiry.

"It was not dat" (he almost stammered in sudden confusion, speaking quite brokenly), "bot, sair, it hat come to me dat you vos an insultor of women, an' had refuse to fight mit mens, I know not; it seems not so."

I was on my feet in an instant, scarcely crediting my own ears, yet on fire with indignation.

"I know not what you may mean," I said, white with anger. "But I hold you personally accountable for those words, and you shall discover that I will fight mit mens."

He pushed his chair hastily back, his face fairly crimson, and began to stammer an explanation; but Maitland interfered.

"What does all this mean, Carlson?" he exclaimed, sternly. "Sit down, Wayne—there is some strange mistake here."

I resumed my chair, wondering if they had all gone crazy, yet resolved upon taking instant action if some satisfactory explanation were not at once forthcoming.

"Come, Carlson, what do you mean by addressing such language to Captain Wayne?"

"Vel," said the Swede, so agitated by the excitement about him he could scarcely find English in which to express himself intelligibly, "it vos dis vay. I would not insult Captain Vane; oh, no, bot it vos told to me, an' I would hav him to know how it all vos. It vos two months ago I go mit de flag of truce into de Federal lines at Minersville. You know dat time? I vos waitin' for answer wen a Yankee rides oop, an' looks me all oer like I vos a hog. 'Vel,' I say, plain like, 'vot you vant?' He say, 'I heard der vos Reb officer come in der lines, an' Irides down to see if he vos der hound vot I wanted to horsevip.' 'Vel,' I say, for it made me much mad, 'you like to horsevip me?' 'No,' he says, laughing, 'it vos a damn pup in der—th Virginia cavalry, named Wayne, I am after.' I say, 'Vot has he done?' He says, 'He insult a woman, an' would not fight mit me.'"

He looked about him anxiously to see if we comprehended his words.

"And what did you say?" from a dozen eager voices.

The Swede gazed at them in manifest astonishment.

"I say I known notting about der woman, but if he say dat an officer of der—th Virginia cavalry would not fight mit him he vos a damned liar. I would have hit him, but I vos under der flag of truce."

I reached out my hand to him across the table.

"I thank you, Captain Carlson," I said, "for both your message and your answer. What did this man look like?"

"He vos a pig yellow, mit a black moustache and gray eyes."

"Do you know him?" questioned Maitland.

"His name is Brennan," I answered slowly, "a major in the Federal service. We have already met twice in rough and tumble contests, but the next time it will be with steel."

"Gentlemen," said Maitland at last, gravely, "this is evidently a personal matter with which we have no direct concern. Captain Wayne's reputation is not one to be questioned, either as regards his chivalry toward women or his bravery in arms. I pledge you his early meeting with this major."

They drank the toast standing, and I read in each face before me a frank, soldierly confidence and comradeship which caused my heart to glow.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Scouting Detail.

This premeditated insult, which Brennan evidently dispatched broadcast in hope that through some unknown channel it might reach me, changed my entire relationship with the man. I have never felt that Brennan was at heart a bad man; he was hard, stern, revengeful, yet I have no doubt under different circumstances I might even have valued him highly as a comrade or a friend. There is no demon like jealousy; and his early distrust of me, fostered by that mad disease had apparently warped his entire nature. Yet not even for love could I consent to leave my honor undefended, and after those hateful words there could be no rest for me until our differences were settled by the stern arbitrament of the naked blade. All prudence to the winds, no opportunity of meeting him should now be cast aside.

The coming day was barely gray in the east when I was awakened by a heavy pounding upon the door. A smart-looking orderly stood without.

"Captain Wayne?" he asked.

"That is my name. What have you, my man?"

"Compliments of Colonel Maitland, chief of staff, sir," he said, handing me a folded paper.

"Dear Wayne:" the private note read, "Believing you would be glad to have the detail I have just arranged to send you at once upon some active service. Please report at these quarters immediately, fully equipped for the field."

Glad! It was the very medicine I most needed, and within twenty minutes of my receipt of this communication I was with Maitland, thanking him warmly for his thoughtfulness.

"Not another word, Wayne," he insisted. "It is not much, a mere scouting detail over neutral territory, and will prove dull enough; I only hope it may help to divert your mind a trifle. Now listen—you are to proceed with twenty mounted men of the escort west as far as the foot-hills, and are expected to note carefully three things: First, the condition of forage for the sustenance of a wagon train; second, what forces of Federal troops, if any, are along the Honeywell; and third, the gathering of all information obtainable as to the reported consolidation of guerrillas for purposes of plunder between the lines. If time suffice, you might cross over into the valley of the Cowpens and learn the condition of forage there as well. A guide will accompany your party, and you are to avoid contact with the enemy as far as possible. Your men carry five days' rations. You understand fully?"

"Ebers," I said sternly. "I do, sir; I presume I am to start at once?"

"Your squad, under command of Sergeant Ebers, is already waiting outside."

"Are you all ready, sergeant?" I asked of the rather heavy-weight German who stood fronting me, his broad, red face as impulsive as though carved from stone.

"Ve vos, captain."

"Where is the guide?"

"Dot is him, mit der mule, ain't it?" he answered, pointing with one huge hand down the road.

"Very well, we will pick him up then as we go."

I cared so little as to whether or not he accompanied us at all; that we had advanced some distance before the thought of him again occurred to me. I knew the gentry fairly well, and had experienced in the past so many evidences of their stupidity, if not actual disloyalty, as to prefer my own knowledge of the country to theirs. My thought, indeed, for several miles was not at all with the little party of troopers jogging steadily at my heels, nor, in truth, was it greatly concerned with the fate of the expedition. That was but service routine, and I rode forward carelessly enough, never dreaming that every hour of progress was bearing me toward the most important adventure of my life. It was the German sergeant who recalled me to the responsibilities of command.

"Captain," he exclaimed apologetically, riding up to my side and wiping his round, perspiring face with great energy, "we are riding too hard, ain't we? Mein Gott, but der horses will give out entirely, already."

"Is that so?" I asked in surprise at his words.

"And what did you say?" from a dozen eager voices.

The Swede gazed at them in manifest astonishment.

"I say I known notting about der woman, but if he say dat an officer of der—th Virginia cavalry would not fight mit him he vos a damned liar. I would have hit him, but I vos under der flag of truce."

"With a sigh of relief he drew back, and as he did so my eyes fell for the first time upon the guide. As I live, it was Jed Bungay, and when I stared at him in sudden amazement he broke into a broad grin.

"Durn if I didn't begin ter think as how ye'd gone an' clar fergot me, Cap."

"Not a bit of it, Jed," and I rode up to him and extended my hand. "But how came you here? Are you the guide?"

"Sure thing, cap; know this yere kintry like a buck. Jaded horsemen from the west, at evening to the castle pressed. By gum, you put Beelzebub an' me through a blamed hard jolt of it so fur."

"Beelzebub?"

"Ye bet, ther mule; I reckon as how ye ain't gone an' fergot him, hev ye?"

"Bungay, what has become of Marria?"

The little man's eyes suddenly filled with tears.

"I jist don't know, cap," he answered mournfully. "Whin I got him ther ol' cabin bed bin plum burnt down, nary stick o' it left, by gum! an' Marria she wuz clean gone. Hain't seed neither hide ner hair o' her since, that's a fac'. An' I sorter drifted back ter you uns 'cause I didn't hev nowhere else ter go."

"Did you hunt for her among the old plantations along the valley?" I asked, deeply touched by his evident feeling.

"She very likely sought refuge in some of those houses."

He looked at me in surprise. "I reckon, cap, as how ye don't know much 'bout what's a goin' on in ther valley fer ther las' few months," he said soberly, rubbing down his mule as he spoke. "Tell ye what, that jist hain't no plantation houses left that now, that's a fac', leastwise not north o' ther lines we uns sorter hol' onto it. Sheridan he played hell with his cavalry raids, an' whut the blue-bellies left ther durbin' guerrillas an' bushwhackers wiped up as clean as a slate. Durin' a crow wudn't starve ter death in ther valley now. Why, cap, them thar deserters—an' sich truck is organized now till they're mighty nigh an army, an' they don't skeer nuttin' leas' her a regtment. I see more'n a hundred an' fifty in one bunch up on ther White Blar two week ago, an' they're worse ner a parcel of pirates. I reckon as how they got Marria, but I'll bet she giv 'em a hot' time afore she done quit."

"Cap," he said, "that is the Minor place."

The very sight of it in the distance was a thrill—a great white house placed well back from the road and almost hidden from sight by fine, large trees an old-fashioned, big-roomed house it looked to be, built after the colonial type, a wide veranda upon three sides, with fluted columns to support the overhanging roof.

"Hain't no signs es fer es I kin see of any trouble havin' 'curr'd that," Jed said slowly, his shrewd gray eyes roaming over the peaceful scene. "Somebody ter hum tew, fer them is a smokin'."

Of course, now I was there, the only sensible thing for me to do would have been to ride alone to the front door, and thus learn all I desired. But what man who loves, who is continually swayed by hopes and fears, by strength and weakness, ever does the sensible thing? I had certainly intended doing so at the start, but now my nerve failed me. She was the wife of another. I could not confess I had ventured to come to her in love, nor could I look into those clear, honest, questioning eyes and lie.

"Halt!" I ordered. "Sergeant!"

"I am here, Captain." "Take your men down into that hollow yonder, and remain there until I return. Better post a sentry on the hill here."

"It will be done, Captain."

"I shall not, probably, be absent more than an hour, so don't permit the men to stray."

"Dot is it, Captain. I will be mit dem all over."

I rode down alone into the thick woods at the foot of the hill, and dismounting, tied my horse to a sapling. Then on foot I struck across the fields, my intention being to come in by the way of the negro quarters at the rear, in hope of meeting some one from whom I might inquire relative to the great house and its inmates.

It was a slight upward trend of land I had to traverse, and although the house was a most sightly object and stood upon the very summit of the elevation, yet so surrounded was it with trees, both fruit and ornamental, I was enabled to make but little of its situation until I approached the out-buildings. I met with no one, nor could I perceive any negroes about the slave quarters. Yet the place did not bear the appearance of desolation. There were horses in the stable, a cat was curled up on one of the cabin door steps, and smoke continued to pour in a dull yellow cloud from the kitchen chimney. Altogether there was much in the situation to puzzle ever, and I no longer regretted that I had exercised some caution in my approach.

The orchard, with the remains of a garden, lay just beyond the house and the stable, protected by a low fence of whitened pickets. So far as I could observe, it contained no occupant, and I pushed open the gate and started down a narrow cinder-path which led between two rows of low bushes. To right of me was an extensive grape-arbor, completely covered with vines, the fresh green leaves forming a delightful contrast to the deep blue sky beyond. As I came opposite an opening leading into this arbor I suddenly caught the flutter of drapery and stopped instantly, my heart throbbing like frightened girl's. It was quite dark beneath the vine shadow, and I could make out no more than that a woman stood there, her back toward me, buried in some task. Possibly she felt my presence, for all at once she glanced around, and upon perceiving me gave vent to a quick exclamation of terror.

"Pardon me," I said hastily, and removing my hat, "but you have nothing to fear." There was a moment's hesitancy on her part, and I knew I was being scrutinized by a pair of bright eyes. "Surely," said a familiar voice, "I cannot be mistaken—you are Captain Wayne."

Before I could even answer she stepped forth from her partial concealment and advanced toward me with cordially extended hands. It was Edith Minor.

"Well, of all men!" she cried gayly, her dark eyes smiling a most kindly welcome. "And Edith and I were speaking about you only yesterday. That is, I was, for really I do not recall now that Edith made any remark apropos of the subject. You have no idea, Captain Wayne, what a hero I have made you out to be. It would make you positively vain if I should confess; why, Arthur has actually become so jealous that he has almost forbidden me even to mention your name in his presence. So when I want to talk about you I am compelled to go to Edith. She hasn't power to stop me, you know, but I'm sure I must bore her awfully. And then to think that when you stood there just now, and I saw your gray uniform, I actually thought the guerrillas had come. My heart beats so now I can hardly talk. But how pale and haggard you look—is it that horrible wound which troubles you still?"

"I have been discharged from the hospital only a short time," I answered, as she paused to take breath. "Indeed, this is my first military service for several months, yet I am feeling quite strong again. Mrs. Brennan, then, is still with you?"

"Oh, yes; we have been here all winter long. It has been so dull, for really nothing has happened, and the valley is quite devoid of inhabitants—even the negroes have gone hunting freedom. But Major Brennan and Arthur are to be here this afternoon, and sometime tonight we are all of us going away together."

GROWTH OF THE MOVEMENT.

Jefferson-County Leads With Its Magnificent Gardening Land—How William Frey Grew Eighty-eight Bushels of Potatoes on One-fourth of an Acre.

Gradually the thinking school people are beginning to see and understand that if the parents will not go to the school the school must go to the home and make itself felt. Nothing has helped more in this movement than the boys' corn and potato clubs in this and many other states. The tremendous growth of the movement is due largely to a rational use of the children's enthusiasm and desire TO DO SOMETHING THEMSELVES.

PLEASURE IN ACHIEVEMENT COMES FROM DOING IT YOURSELF, and pleasure in achievement is the largest factor in human life.

William and Walter Frey live about eight miles from Louisville in a splendid farming and gardening section of Jefferson county. When your reporter

No remedy, official or unofficial, has a greater accredited basis for the claims we make for it than Peruna as a remedy for catarrh.

I have never been opposed at any time to the regulations offered by the Pure Food and Drugs Act. I am not now opposed to its provisions, but I am opposed to the proposed amendments to give to a panel of board of physicians the unqualified authority to decide as to all therapeutic claims which

PRINCESS.

Since our last and within the past few days the following deaths have occurred:

Fred Gesling age 54 years, died suddenly at his home with heart failure. He leaves a wife, two children and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss. He was buried in Ashland.

William R. Meade age 69 years, living at Old Princess last Saturday week after an eight-day attack of pneumonia fever. He leaves a wife several children and a host of friends. His remains were taken to the old home graveyard where, after funeral rites by Rev. Duncan, they were placed to remain until the final call.

William Frey, the elder brother, grew one-fourth of an acre of potatoes this season. He harvested eighty-eight bushels of splendid tubers on the plot. When he was asked about the crop and its cultivation, he said:

"Yes that yield was some better than most of the neighbors around here. You see, eighty-eight bushels on my little piece is the same as 117 barrels to the acre. Of course I did some things the neighbors didn't do, because I did all of my work from the directions the government sent me. Everybody plows manure under when they break the ground in the spring, but I used my two big wagon loads of rotten manure for a top dressing after my potatoes were harvested."

"The folks that came over here said my potatoes were darker green than any of the others in the neighborhood; an' we all saw that the vines were mighty heavy an' fine. I went over the patch three times with a fourteen tooth harrow.

"As a result of the above mentioned deaths deep sorrow and much sympathy hangs over this entire vicinity as the respective families; the public school; the Sunday school and the churches are all effected greatly by these deaths.

The sick folks as follows are somewhat improved, compared with conditions of last week.

Mrs. Willard Shelton, John Price, of the Princess coal company, A. B. Moore and Miss Etta Moore eldest daughter of Richard Moore.

David Shelton, on whom an operation was recently performed, is much better at this writing.

Miss Anna Davis, who was home during the holidays from Richmond, Ky., where she is attending school, returned last week. She was accompanied by Miss Mant Sturgel, daughter of Dr. J. D. Sturgel, who entered school at that place. She will remain there during the full school year, and we feel sure that it is another case where "Big Sandy" will lead her classes.

Mrs. Grace Wolf is attending school at Coalton.

Rev. Cunningham of the Holiness church is conducting a revival at this place now, it may continue three weeks.

H. A. Payton, of the Big Run Coal Co., from Winchester, Ky., was here last Tuesday.
